

Where does this lead us?

- Web apps w/ less friction & less session-oriented:
  - Snappy response at all times
  - UI & some content available immediately
  - Fire & forget editing
- New content pushed; users don't need to check in
- Poor connections mean you're (somewhat) out-of-date, not out-of-luck.

- When you're offline, you can return to where you've been (or prepared to go), but can't go someplace totally new
- It's easier to grab some content & unplug - to relax, or make a considered reply.
- Whether people will choose to engage deliberately is unknown.